

About the Authors:

Takahiro NAKAJIMA is associate professor in Transcultural Studies at the University of Tokyo. His publications include Humanities Philosophy (Iwanami shoten, 2009), The Zhuangzi: Announce The Hours With Becoming A Cock (Iwanami shoten, 2009), The Reverberation of Chinese Philosophy: Language and Politics (University of Tokyo Press, 2007), and The Chinese Turn in Philosophy (UTCP, 2007).

Harry HAROOTUNIAN is visiting professor at Duke University and Columbia University, professor emeritus of History and East Asian Studies at New York University and the Max Palevsky Professor of History and Civilization, emeritus at the University of Chicago. He is the author of The Empire's New Clothes: Paradigm Lost, and Regained (Prickly Paradigm Press/ University of Chicago Press, 2004), Overcome by Modernity: History, Culture and Commodity in Interwar Japan (Princeton University Press, 2000) and History's Disquiet: Modernity, Cultural Practice and the Question of the Everyday Life (Columbia University Press, 2000).

Naoki SAKAI is professor in the departments of Comparative Literature and Asian Studies at Cornell University. His publications include Voices of the Past (Cornell University Press, 1991), Translation and Subjectivity (University of Minnesota Press, 1997), Japan, Image, the United States—Community of Sympathy and Imperial Nationalisms (Seidosha, 2007), Hope and the Constitution (Ibunsha, 2008). He has led the project of TRACES: a multilingual series of cultural theory and translation, in Chinese, English, Korean, Japanese and German.

Richard REITAN is assistant professor of history at Franklin and Marshall College. He is the author of Making a Moral Society (University of Hawai'i Press, 2010), and articles on Japanese intellectual history including "Approaching the Moral Ideal in Late Meiji Japan," Japan Studies Review, 9 (2005), "Reassessing the Dangers of the 'New Woman' in Early Taishō Japan," positions (forthcoming), and "Völkerpsychologie and the Appropriation of 'Spirit' in Meiji Japan," Modern Intellectual History (forthcoming).

Eddy DUFOURMONT is associate professor of Japanese history at the University of Bordeaux 3. His works include Nakae Chōmin, Dialogues politiques entre trois ivrognes (translated and annotated with Christine Lévy, CNRS editions, 2008), "La pensée politique et la philosophie de Nakae Chōmin" (in the above volume), and "Satō Eisaku, Yasuoka Masahiro and the Re-Establishment of February 11th as National Day" (in Schwentker and Saaler ed., The Power of Memory in Modern Japan, Global Oriental press, 2008).

Dennitza GABBRAKOVA is assistant professor of Japanese at the City University of Hong Kong. She is interested in Japanese modern literature and culture from the perspective of world literature, postcolonialism and geopoetics. Her works include "Reverberations of a Utopian Utterance: Lu Xun, Ōe Kenzaburō, Simada Masahiko" (in Utopia: Here and There, UTCP Booklet 4, 2008).

Yuji NISHIYAMA is project lecturer at the University of Tokyo Center for Philosophy (UTCP). He works on modern French philosophy, focusing on Jacques Derrida and Maurice Blanchot. He is the author of Literature as Contestation: Solitude, Friendship and Community in Maurice Blanchot (Ochanomizu-syobō 2007), and the editor of Philosophie et Éducation II: Le droit à la philosophie (UTCP 2009), and Philosophy and the University (Miraisya 2009). He is also the Japanese translator of several books by Jacques Derrida, Maurice Blanchot, Jean-Luc Nancy and Catherine Malabou.